If the number of missing members reaches six or more, the agency will be immediately removed from the list of designated travel agencies for this program. Those removed from the list must wait for a year before being eligible for re-listing, provided they receive recommendations from the Tourism Administration's overseas offices and tourism authorities of other countries, and pass the Tourism Administration's review. For severe violations, the suspension period may be extended to three years.
	(2)	If a tour member overstays, any repatriation expenses should be paid by the member of the tour group. If the traveler cannot afford the expenses, the domestic reception travel agency shall be jointly and severally liable.
	(3)	If a designated travel agency is found to have accepted travelers from a non-designated travel agency and helped them apply for the project, the agency may be immediately removed from the designated list.
	(4)	If a local travel agency is found to have twice failed to make full, proper and timely notifications as required by regulations, the agency may be removed from eligibility for this project. Those removed from the list must wait for one year before being eligible for reacceptance. For severe violations, the suspension period may be extended to three years.
	(5)	If a designated travel agency's violation number for tour members leaving a group or overstaying has not reached a level resulting in removal from the project, the violation number may be reset to zero on the day after going one year without any recorded violations.
